POEM

Tomorrow

From Christine's daughter Sally

What if there were no tomorrows and all we had were today's Then if that was the case, I'd wish for the longest day for today
And I'd spend every minute with you, doing all the things we'd ever loved
We'd laugh, we'd love, we'd listen, we'd learn
And I'd never worry about tomorrow when I couldn't be with you
In fact, I'd make every day today and be together just us two
But now that dreaded tomorrow's here, please know I don't want you to leave
Or be left behind, cause every moment I spent with you
Were the best times of my life

CLOSING POEM

Lit Up With Laughter

Some people light up rooms with their laughter
Others can brighten the world with a smile.
Many will make you feel happy
By sitting nearby for a while.

Some folk can cheer up a cold day
With just a few words or a glance.
Others can make things seem better
If you just give them half of a chance.

But there are those whose whole life is a blessing,
Not just a moment, a smile or a word.
They make all around them feel special,
No person ignored or unheard.

They give all they have and then give more,
While helping somebody get through.
It's not about thanks or for mention,
It's something that's in them they do.

And when it's time that they sadly must leave us
We grieve ? but also we smile.
We give thanks that our lives were connected
And were tucked in their heart for a while
